

'Ban book on Modi's broken promises'

Petitioner Finds Gujarati Book Unfair To PM

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Ahmedabad: Narsinhbhai Solanki, a supporter of Prime Minister Narendra Modi, has moved a local court demanding ban on a book published recently in Gujarati on the PM's alleged failure to fulfil promises made during the 2014 general elections. The litigant, who has objected to this publication, has also made Modi a party-respondent in the civil suit.

JR Shah, a resident of Paldi, has written a book titled, 'Fekuji Have Dilli Ma' (Fekuji is now in Delhi) and got it published by his own venture, JR Enterprise. The book allegedly talks about the promises that Modi had made during the campaign for the 2014 parliamentary elections. Finding the book's title and content offensive, Solanki, a resident of Behrampura who claims to be a social worker, filed a suit in the city civil court on Thursday seeking directions restraining Shah from printing the book further and stopping its sale with immediate effect.

Solanki's advocate, M S Bhavsar, told TOI that the book is all about the Prime Minister's unfulfilled promises. "We have demanded a ban on this book on the ground that the title itself is defamatory and it can hurt the feelings of the Prime Minister and his supporters," Bhavsar said. The lawyer further said that they had argued in their petition that the Narendra Modi government had been in power for only two years.

"This is too short a period in which things can be changed in the country. There is still time for the government to perform and fulfil all the promises that Modi had made during last elections. It is not fair to judge him so soon and publish books with defamatory titles," said Bhavsar.

Complaint against mamlatdar
A Thaltej resident has filed a complaint against a mamlatdar, his wife and daughter for cheating. Rajkumar Rai said Mahendra Pandya, his wife Damyanti and daughter Priyanka got a flat from him to stay for some time but did not vacate it when demanded. TNN

creating the nation builders

You want us to show you where we plan to have new towers? Ask us. We're open.

You have a lot to ask, we have nothing to hide. So we'll show you what we're planning. And you can tell us what we should be planning. Because only if we are truly open with each other can we build a better network together. Which is why we are now India's first Open Network.

open NETWORK

"Open Network" refers to open access to information on tower positioning & quality of voice & data services immediately & as per search requirements on the portal. Customers may raise network issues & suggest new tower sites. As on 01.06.2016 Airtel is the only service provider to share information in this manner. Visit airtel.in/opennetwork.
